When I wrote "Transhumanist jargon for the discerning time traveller" I was inspired from researching what I considered the main streams in transhumanist and futurist identification, which I identified as life extension futurism, singularitarianism, transhumanism and biohacking

- After saving your post, you will be in the post page.
- Click < Your name's Blog to return to your main blog page. Don't worry, your post will still be shown there along with other subsequent posts you make.
- You may also Like or Comment on the posting.

Using My Blog – Editing your post

• You can Edit or Delete your posts by clicking on the drop-down caret at the corner of your post.

Note

• Be careful when deleting your post. There is no "Recycle/Trash" bin option.

www.mceducation.com Understanding the Viewer, Contributor and Moderator Roles

The "permissions" for Blogs are different. These permissions are based on roles and can be set up anytime when you want to share your Blog. Any actions in the Blogs are dependent upon the roles assigned to the users. These roles are :

- Viewer
  - Viewers cannot make any posts. However, they are allowed to comment if the option has ben set in each blog post.
- Contributor
  - Contributors can make new posts in blogs. They cannot edit/delete posts which are not their own, nor can they change any settings.
- Moderator
  - You can set a teacher, or groups of teachers as moderators to manage a blog.

B Each form class can have only one class blog.

• Click on the student's names to go to their respective blogs.

Note

- Other blogs only show individual student blogs.
- All student blogs are private. Other students cannot view each other's blog unless it has been shared with them.
- If a teacher wishes to see another teacher's blogs, you need them to share their blogs with you.
- If there is a "no-entry" sign-icon on the student's name, that means the student has not made any posts in their blog yet, therefore, there is nothing to view.
